SLAPSHOT

➡ If you were any part of the hardcore scene in the 80’s, whether in a band, a promoter or a fan, you came across punk rock show flyers. You either made flyers or you plastered your bedroom walls with them. This book is a tribute to those flyers. There were no computers used back then to create them; they were penned, cut, taped, glued and posted on walls, telephone poles, car windshields or merely handed to you at a show.

We all collected flyers throughout the years and for some reason couldn’t part with them. I knew I always wanted to do something productive down the line with them. So I decided to pool flyers of mine along with Danny, Art, Joe, Kevin, Greg and batting clean-up, Dave Schwartzman.

There is no real chronological order to the layout of the book. They fall in the order in which the scene unfolded to us at that time.

This book is flyers and flyers only
Pure punk rock nostalgia.

Enjoy

LESS THAN ZERO

Year of the Ass

by Jim Testa

It is increasingly obvious that, for whatever reasons, it is suddenly very in to be an asshole.

Assholes are everywhere - rude, obnoxious, unthinking, self-serving, unfunny. Comedians don't tell jokes anymore, they just stand on stage and scream. Writers sling cheap insults and call each other names and call that rock criticism. Sports figures are either one step ahead of the narcs or cheered for goon tactics that cripple fellow athletes. Whether it's Pee Wee Herman or Sam Kinison or Howard Stern or Charles Martin or Byron Coley, it's always the same. And what's worse, that stuff isn't even condemned anymore; it's lionized. Bullies and creeps and weirdos and jerks, once the bane of society, are our new national heroes.

Maybe it's time that the rest of us take a good look at what we've been applauding lately. Question the culture we support. Is that guy really funny - does his humor make some telling point about human nature, the essence of all true humor since the beginnings of civilization - or is he just acting like a jerk? Does the morning deejay really have to use words like 'spic' and 'nigger,' words that deny human dignity, rather than affirming it? Does it serve any real purpose for all the back-biting, cheap shots, and negativity that's pervaded fanzines this year?

I'm not arguing that assholes have no place in society. Troublemakers, geeks, and losers have often been on the cutting edge. The writings of Mykel Board and Steve Albini - two familar figures in the punk community, both columnists - often evoke extreme responses. Both these guys write things you can't believe any sane person would espouse. But even as the things they say & do make you think, "Asshole," they at least make you think. By their very outrageousness, they force you to rethink your own values and formulate a response. And that's a valuable role. In any community.

Thankfully, in the 6 months or so that we've been doing thisn newsletter, I've had the chance to meet or communicate with lots of people who aren't assholes. They're often anonymous and unsaluted, but behind the scenes, of their own accord, they're working hard for us: Writing, promoting, supporting. If this newsletter has helped a little, it's been worth it. But what I think about most when I think about the kids out there struggling to find an identity and a voice in our scene is this:

They deserve better than assholes for heroes.

HAPPY HOLIDAYS!

Everyone involved in this book grew up in Northern New Jersey, so you could say this book is geographically biased. I grew up near a club called the Showplace, which was a lot like any other dark, dirty, loud punk place. The Showplace did have an actual pit though. The pit was about 6 inches recessed into the floor, near the stage. I am not sure if this is how the term "pit" was derived, I'm not sure if other clubs had these. The Showplace did and that is all that mattered to me at that time.

My friend Steve Burns got me into the club even though I was under age. I think he looked after me mainly because he wanted to get with my older sister. He would have no idea the effect these shows would have on me through the years

I visited the Showplace in 2005.
It is now a strip bar. I wouldn't have it any other way.

Black Flag played there in 1985.

I missed seeing the Misfits by less than one year. I never would have even known who they were if my cousin Rich didn't introduce me to hardcore back in 1984. I was 14. He took me to see my first show, the Cro-mags and Malignant Tumor, at the Rainbow Nite Club in Passaic N.J. Jim Murphy was there skating. No stage, just a small sweaty room. Lots of skinheads and skaters. Everybody knew each other, it felt like a party. I was welcomed in. Then it started. BOOM! The music was intense. Like nothing I had ever heard or seen before. Everybody went nuts and my hardcore days began.

My first experience with anything Misfits related happened a little while later. Rich used to talk about the Misfits all the time, like they were this super group. They had broken up and the records were hard to find, so I just listened to other stuff. Little did I know the influence they would have on just about everything I would do.

Rich called one day and said he just got the new record from the singer of the Misfits. When I got there and first looked at the cover, three white guys completely drenched in blood with the name Samhain on the top, I remember thinking, "What is this"? We used to hang out in his basement, which was pretty dark and dreary to begin with, so, when the first song came on it literally scared the shit out of me. After about a minute the music kicked in and it hit me like a rock. I soon realized this band was different, special, like nothing I had seen or heard before. I got into the Misfits after I heard Samhain.

The Misfits broke up before I even knew they existed. I borrowed "Walk Among Us" and couldn't stop listening to it. I started collecting the records and got hooked.

But, not completely. That didn't happen until I saw Samhain at the Ritz in 86, at their last show. It was the New Music Seminar with DOA, MDC, Celtic Frost, Rogues Gallery and the Cheetah Chrome Motherfuckers. With that line up and all I remember was Samhain. They sounded incredible. To me that was their peak and also a defining moment in my hardcore youth. I became obsessed. I started to grow my hair long in front, dress in black and collect everything I could find. I knew all the words, still do, and occasionally would travel to the Lodi Post Office and hopefully run into Glenn, I never did. I waited for the next Samhain show but it never came. They were supposed to play at City Gardens on Halloween in 87' but never did. Bad Brains played instead, which was a nice replacement.

Hardcore was changing and not for the better. Everybody started to sound and look the same. Stupid violence would ruin the shows. Clubs built walls between the bands and the crowds to prevent diving, but all they did was make it more dangerous. Bands just fell apart. The fun ended.

The set list in this book came from the first Danzig show at City Gardens. It was a good show but as a devoted Misfits/Samhain fan when the devilocks and music disappeared, so did I.

D . J . Y

It was 1988, I was listening to bands like; Minor Threat, Agnostic Front, and Crumbsuckers. My brother told me he just saw this band, Gorilla Biscuits, and that I would like them because they were Straight Edge, just like I was. They were playing CBGB's in a couple of weeks and said he would take me. I was psyched.

I remember hearing the opening bass line for "high hopes" and just watching the crowd at CBGB's go nuts. People were stage diving non-stop and doing flips into the crowd. I was hooked. My friends and I went to see every Straight Edge band play as much as we could. Going to clubs like The Anthrax, CBGB's, City Gardens, and Wally's Place was a regular weekend occurrence.

Those times were so much fun, and every time I see one of these old flyers, I smile knowing that I was a part of something special.

It is the season of Cain in Albany once more. Shamans robed in self-righteousness and blood lust gather again to offer human lives on the altar of vengeance, by electric current to slay them and so to restore peace to a troubled state. And once more their sacrifice is rejected, as Cain's was in the beginning: "Bring me no burnt offerings." There is a mechanical quality to the Dance of Death

Dear Ma… This country is so beautiful when the sun is shining — mountains, farmers in their rice paddies with their water buffalo, palm trees, monkeys, birds… For a fleet moment I wasn't in a war zone at all, just on vacation but still missing you and the family…
Love to all, your son

18 August 1991

Folks,

This newsletter is to let you know that Verbal Assault is no longer--sad, but true. Our last show was played on August 4 of this year at the Blue Pelican in Newport.

As I've explained before, there are a number of different reasons for the band's amicable end at this time. School and other parts of our lives have made it difficult to keep the band a full-time project, which was necessary in order to keep moving ahead creatively. Though the shows that we played and the new songs that we wrote were solid and progressive, it still seemed that, in the end, it was better just to end it right now on a good note, rather than let VA drag on forever and become stale.

As I've mentioned, during the month of July, the band returned to Inner Ear Studio in Washington to record three songs for our final release, Exit. We plan to put this out tentatively as a ten-inch EP on Groove records in North America, and on Konkurrel in Europe. The three songs will also appear on the upcoming CD releases of the VA discography; the Groove (i.e. North American) version will contain all of the studio material since Trial, and the Konk/European release will include that LP as well.

As far as future projects go, Pete has relocated to Olympia, WA, to start school and a new project with Dug (recently of Fidelity Jones). Doug and Dylan are jamming with local groups in the area, but with no definite plans as of yet. I have no plans to be in another band. I'm going to school, fucking around, and seeing what happens. Perhaps I'll write.

And if you feel like writing, that's cool too, but PLEASE enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, because I'm going to have to answer the mail without any band money, so no SASE, no reply.

That's about it. Again, we just want to give our final thanks to everyone--and you are far to numerous to mention at this late date--for all of the love and assistance that has been given to us in so many places all across the world. As much as we worked to make VA possible, it would have never happened the way it did if it weren't for you.

Most of all, thank you to everyone that came to our shows, listened to our music, and communicated. You are the ones who really made it happen.

Peace,

CHRISTOPHER JONES
